DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY AND ELIGIBILITY DETERMINATION:

Summary Description:

The D. Long Farm is located at the northwest corner of Shore Highway (MD 404) and Ridgely-Bridgetown Road (MD 312), in Caroline County on Maryland's Eastern Shore. The 205.5-acre property has a dwelling, a meat house, a dairy barn with attached milkhouse, modern equipment sheds, modern broiler (chicken) houses, and a modern secondary residence. The property's barn burned in the 1960s. The dwelling, which dates to the mid-nineteenth century, consists of a two-and-a-half-story, five-bay main block with a rebuilt full-width porch on the facade, a twentieth-century two-story wing on its eastern gable end, and a one-story enclosed porch on the wing's eastern gable end. It is covered with aluminum siding, has an asphalt-shingle roof, sits on a pargeted brick foundation, and has one interior brick chimney. Windows include a combination of two-over-two, six-over-six, and one-over-one sash. The historic outbuildings include a frame meat house and a concrete-block, gambrel-roofed dairy barn with attached milkhouse.

Significance:

The D. Long Farm does not exhibit sufficient architectural or historical significance to be recommended eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places under any criteria. The house has been encompassed in modern additions and materials. The barn is no longer extant having been destroyed by fire in the mid-twentieth century. After this, the farm's historic pursuit of dairy farming was discontinued. The majority of the agricultural outbuildings are modern, including equipment sheds and broiler (chicken) houses. In addition, the historic environment of the farm was substantially altered in the mid-twentieth century when the section of MD 404 was constructed to bypass the towns of Queen Anne and Hillsboro taking a large swath of the farm's frontage.
